CAMPAIGN IS NOT IN SIGHT OF TOTAL YET

Less Than One Third Received So Far.

MUCH MORE NEEDED.

Commerce Is Only One Surpassing Its Objective.

The Campaign returns received from the Undergraduates are far from their objective, but it is hoped that they will reach and even surpass the amount they are after.

Science as a whole is doing splendidly, there being fine returns yesterday. However, third year Science is still very low, according to its report.

The Medical Faculty is backward also, especially the final year, whose returns make no comparison with those of that year in Science, who have collected $1,900 to the Meds. $800. Second year is the only class with even a fair amount of their objective, having sent in $950 to date.

All returns must be completed by to-day at 6 p.m. So get busy. A fresh supply of cards is promised by noon at the Union Porter's. The Campaign printers are showing very poor work in supplying the cards.

On Wednesday evening a mass meeting of the Campaign is called for at the Windsor Hotel, 8.30 p.m. At that meeting enough subscriptions must be at hand to make up our totals. Here is where our Undergrad. subscriptions are going to count.

Commerce is showing the way in that it is the only one surpassing its objective. None of the others have come any way near attaining theirs. All honor to the Commerce boys. Law and Dentistry are lagging behind. Arts made their first returns yesterday afternoon, totalling $1,445. Go to it, Arts. Buck up, boys, and make the last minutes the most successful of all.

CERCLE FRANCAIS TO HOLD SMOKER

Noted French-Canadian Journalist to Speak Wednesday.

The second meeting of the Cercle Francais will be held in the Union on Wednesday evening of this week. It will take the form on this occasion of an informal smoker. The original intention had been to hold all, or at least as many as possible, of the Cercle meetings in the form of a supper, but despite the optimistic prognostications of a certain section of the local press, the H. C. L. is still on too prohibitively high a perch to permit of this. It is generally felt, moreover, that more real enjoyment can be derived from a smoker modelled on the Union variety than can be had from a formal sit-down supper.

On this occasion the guest of honor will be Mr. Victor Barbeau, a French-Canadian journalist of note. He is well-known as an article writer, contributing to La Presse last year under the pseudonym of "Turc". The subject of his address will be, "Journalism in Montreal".

There will be an informal discussion of the plans of the Cercle for the future meetings. On the occasion of the last meeting of the Cercle several other important societies were unfortunately holding meetings at the same time. This time no such clash will occur, so a record attendance is expected. Don't forget there will be music and eats as well as smokes. Further details concerning the local talent, which will be a feature of this smoker, will be published in these columns shortly. In the meantime keep this Wednesday night free for the Cercle Francais smoker.

R.V.C. AT KINGSTON AT BIG FEATURE

Co-eds, Showed Splendid Spirit Saturday.

KINDLY TREATMENT.

Both Railway Officials and McGill Men Made Trip Pleasant.

A bevy of Red Tams cheered the R.V.C. contingent as the Kingston train pulled out from Bonaventure Station Saturday morning. Every kindness and courtesy was shown us by the railroad officials during our trip. From the moment our team first appeared on the field we all thrilled with pride, and during the whole game this feeling never left us.

After the game we paid a visit to Queen's, once again meeting some of the girls who were here last year for the Basketball game between Queen's and R.V.C. Here we were given tea, which was greatly appreciated by all. The journey home, although long, was pleasant. The consideration shown us by the McGill men, both on the train and at the game, helped to make the day one which we will never forget.

FOREIGN CLUB CHANGES NAME

Now Known As Cosmopolitan Club—Dinner To Be Arranged.

At a meeting of the Foreign Students' Society, on Thursday last, it was decided to change the name to "Cosmopolitan Club."

The executive is busy making plans for a successful season. The first function will be a dinner which will be held some time before Christmas.

Those members who were absent from last week's meeting are requested to get in touch with Salamis, the vice-president, as early as possible.

MR. VAUGHAN'S BOOK

Mr. Walter Vaughan, formerly secretary of Mr. Gill University, is the author of "The Life and Work of Sir William Van Horne," recently published by the Century Co., of New York. Mr. Vaughan was intimately associated with the late President of the Canadian Pacific Railway during his residence in Montreal. In the publisher's announcement the book is stated to be the authorized biography of the man who built the C. P. R. and an intimate pen-picture of a tremendous personality that needed an entire continent to express itself. It must indeed be of interest to those who knew him, to hear of him again in this respect.

CAFETERIA.

To-day and subsequently, supper in the Cafeteria will be served a la carte. It is much easier to handle special orders now the training table has been discontinued; there will be no delay in the service.

EVERYTHING AUGURS WELL FOR NOV. 26

Junior Prom. Is An Assured Success.

GREAT PREPARATION.

Ballroom Of Union Already Being Decorated—Effect Will Be Splendid.

Many and varied are the conjectures propounded to account for the keen and active interest being displayed in the preparations for the Junior Prom., so evident last evening by the many students, men and women, who turned out to aid in the decorating. Some go so far as to intimate that the burning of the Jardin de Danse may have something to do with the increased concern apparent towards all things pertaining to the Junior Dance. Others are strong in their conviction that it is merely a latent desire to "do their bit" for those in charge that impels such a number to aid; while others are so bold as to assert that only a strong determination to make this year's Prom. excel all preceding functions can adequately justify the monkey-like antics and seemingly Freshman-like conduct of usually staid and sedate Juniors, such as was evidenced yesterday as they balanced perilously on ladders or perched ungracefully on the railings (the men only, of course) in their efforts to arrange the decorations or to give encouraging and supposedly helpful suggestions towards that end. There is even current a theory that possibly the presence of a few fair co-eds had to do with the absorbing interest of the amateur decorators.

Be that as it may, proceedings are going along apace in the Union ballroom to insure the success of this season's most important affair. The ceiling is being strung with purple streamers, resulting in a canopy effect, while the novel lighting arrangements proposed will serve to heighten the beauty of the scene from a spectator's point of view. As has been emphasized in previous issues, no expense and no care are being spared to bring the 1920 Junior Prom., if possible, beyond former standards.

THEOLOGS PLAY BASKETBALL GAME

Wesleyan Team Defeated by Congregationalists in Molson Hall.

The first game of the Inter-Theological Colleges Basketball League was played in Molson Hall last night, when the speedy Congregationalists defeated the Wesleyans by the decisive score of 24 to 12. The Congregationalists have been champions of this league for a number of years, and though it is too early in the season to pick the winner for this year, yet the Congregationalists from their showing of last night should be well up in the running for premier honors.

The game was fast and exciting from start to finish, and play was remarkably clean. The Wesleyans had not nearly as many experienced players on their side as the Congregationalists had, but they fought gamely, although their efforts to break away and score were frustrated time and again by the strong defence put up by Whitman and Smith. The Wesleyans did not have any men upon whom they could rely for accurate shooting, although Roberts displayed great facility in shooting penalties. Moore and Bronson, on the other hand, could be trusted to break away and shoot the odd basket from a difficult angle. Davis played a strong game on the defence for the Wesleyans, and had it not been for his stellar work the score would have been much greater.

The Congregationalists started the scoring when Moore dropped the ball, neatly through on a penalty shot which he followed soon with another tally. The Wesleyans scored in the next few minutes, and during the first period held the Congregationalists to a five-point lead. In the second period, Moore and Bronson (Continued on Page 4.)

THE EDUCATIONAL VALUE OF THE NEWSPAPER

There are many kinds of education which we may give ourselves or receive at college, but in all probability most of us have set our minds upon some definite objective, and in a more or less determined manner are trying to become educated in our chosen and particular line of work. At the present time, however, we are faced with so many momentous questions of national polity and world-wide importance that we owe it to ourselves to learn something of the momentous questions of the day and how they are being dealt with. In these days of specialization it is obviously impossible for every one to take all the courses he might wish in order to acquire a general education, but there can be no excuse on the other hand for anyone not having a good, thorough and complete knowledge of present day affairs. It is a duty we owe to ourselves, as well as the country in which we live, to keep abreast of the times so that we may be able to take an intelligent part in the affairs of the country after we leave these halls of learning. The manner in which this can be done is to spend a portion of each day reading the newspaper accounts of what is actually taking place. A prevalent habit, which one can notice in the common rooms at the present time is to see many of those who read at all resort to the sporting pages. Then two or three "would be" fans get together and discuss so and so as a hockey player, or the chance of this or that team winning the first or second series of games. There can be no harm in taking a passing interest in things sporting, but the general trend is too often that this is as far as their reading extends. Have you ever tried to converse with someone on a problem of real worth? About all they know of what is going on outside the realm of sport is what they have gathered from a bulletin board or from a poster placed in front of a grocery shop or book store. Try to discuss, at any length, a topic of national concern, and what do you so often find? These are the people who are vibrating with excitement over some new phase of a situation which has arisen, but in the course of a very short time it is clearly understood that the same people are nothing more than veneer. If they are a little more interested than the average, in all probability they will have read nearly all the large headlines on the front pages, and possibly the black-faced abbreviated dispatches. Hastily turning through the pages of the paper they would never think of reading an article of one or two columns in length. That would be a waste of time.

Events are happening so rapidly now, and there is so much history being made every day that we can hardly be expected to devote sufficient time to keep informed on all lines, but we should at least possess more than a spoon-fed and digested knowledge of present day salient facts. To quote at all times the opinions of others is of not much benefit to ourselves, and what is needed is a general, first hand presentation of conditions or facts so that we can come to our own conclusions. Once we possess an acquaintance of the truths we are in a position to discuss intelligently a situation, and from discussion with others we will be broadening along general lines, which is the true ideal of an education.

Erudition is a splendid thing, but it is not all. There should be more to be obtained from a college education than learning to become a book-worm or a "dig," and there never was a time such as the present, with its almost boundless possibilities, to obtain the advantages which are within the reach of all.

To the Editor, "McGill Daily."

Dear Sir,—

There is little doubt that the game with Toronto on Saturday last was lost through nervousness on the part of the back division, and, in my judgment, this was caused by the unusual conditions which prevailed in University circles during the preceding week. Never in the history of College football was such interest manifested in a game. Scarcely anything else was talked about for some time before. The Montreal and Toronto papers were full of all sorts of reports and conjectures, and (on the part of the latter in some cases) of uncalculated criticism. Our own "Daily" rightly enough gave up a large part of its space to the impending event, and, again, rightly enough helped to swell the enthusiasm and increase the excitement.

What effect must all this have had on the team? Living in the tensest kind of an atmosphere, knowing that they were the centre of all this excitement, and that the hopes of every student at McGill (and one might say every citizen of Montreal) were centred on them, is it not natural to suppose that they should become somewhat unnerved? Besides, the Varsity players had perhaps more ground for confidence than the McGill team. Everybody knew that in order to win McGill would even have to improve on their magnificent play of Nov. 6th. Of course there was always the chance that the other fellows might not come up to expectations, but that, of course, could not be counted on. On the face of it the chances were against McGill, only slightly, perhaps, but still against. Although these facts would no doubt tend to make our men all the more determined to do their utmost, they could not but be perturbing, especially when they knew how great was the interest which the event had created.

It would have been to the advantage of the team if they could have only escaped from such an atmosphere altogether, and if they had not known anything that was either said or written. And yet they were kept in it up to the last moment. They were not even given the chance of a few hours' relaxation under a different set of conditions. Had they gone to Kingston the day before, I venture to think that they would have been able to work off a certain amount of that nervousness by which they must have been affected. To subject them to the more or less disturbing effect of a train journey of five hours, accompanied by a band of super-heated supporters, on the very day on which they were to play such an important fixture, and without any time for composure between the end of one set of unfavorable conditions and the beginning of another, was simply to court defeat. The Toronto team had had the upset of the railway trip the day before (which was moreover quiet and untroubled as compared with that of the McGill men), had had the advantage of a full night's sleep under unexciting conditions and without the bugbear of an early call to catch a train. For twenty-four hours before the game their minds were taken up, to some extent, at least, with other things, and whatever tension they were under must have been greatly relieved. They were thus in a better condition mentally, and as a consequence physically, to act their part and so started the game with this much in their favor.

Add to this the fact that the McGill men were playing in Kingston against their will, and that the surroundings generally were not conducive to buoyancy and we have sufficient to account for the fact that players who were generally steady and effective failed to come up to their usual standard.

Some person might ask how it was that only the back division seemed to be adversely affected by these conditions. The answer is easy. The backs are in the open where every play can be seen. They occupy the positions where coolness and nerve are most required. In the case of the McGill men, they knew that as the line men were practically certain to do their part well, success or defeat depended on them.

But notwithstanding all these handicaps and notwithstanding what inevitably results from the state of mind in which they must have been, how splendidly they still stuck to their posts and played the game like men to the bitter end. They showed the true fighting spirit that sometimes or another spells success. They lost, but that fact should not, and does not, detract from the honor and glory which they have brought to the University as a result of their season's work. We never fully realize what the effort they made means—how much college work neglected, all for the honor and glory of Old McGill. How much we owe them! They did not bring home the championship, but they did bring home the same lines but they end the season with a splendid reputation for sportsmanship and manliness, and with a noble record of self-sacrifice and devotion to a duty which for the sake of their Alma Mater they were willing to undertake. They did their best; no more could have been expected.

It is pleasing to know that the students of McGill recognize what all this meant, and that they were bi-minded enough to forget the defeat and to cheer the men for what they had done rather than to impart blame for what they had not done. Nothing could have contributed more to take away the smart which the team felt than the yells and cheers that greeted Mr. Editor, that we of the outside spirit which wins in the end. The determination to stand by the team, whatever befalls, will sooner or later bring the desired result.

This year's experience should raise the question as to whether or not the practice of playing the tie in neutral territory should not be abandoned. It is unsatisfactory from a spectacular point of view as no such arrangements can be made by the Rooters' Clubs, as for instance were made by our own on the 6th instant, and by the Toronto students earlier in the season. As things are now, no University can witness the deciding game (if there should happen to be a tie) in its own town. How much better it would be if a regulation were made that in such cases the game should be played in the home cities alternately in accordance with a pre-arranged schedule. On the whole it would prove just as satisfying to the teams and certainly more so to the students and supporters generally of the universities concerned. And from the point of view of finances, there is everything in favor of the suggested change. It is surely worth considering.

Yours very truly,

N.

To the Editor, "McGill Daily."

Dear Sir,—

May I take this means of calling to your attention a mis-statement of facts that appeared in the "Daily" of last Thursday. The article referred to is that on the Financial Campaign of the McGill Y.M.C.A. Contrary to the instructions of the organization that authorized publication of the item, the report was changed by the editorial staff and additions were made that were absolutely uncalled for and incidentally contrary to fact. The general tenor of the item gives the reader the impression that the "Y" Financial is for the specific benefit of Strathcona Hall, not as a centre of Student Christian Activity, but as a bargain boarding-house. This, as is generally known, is definitely not the case, for not one cent of the money that comes to the McGill Y.M.C.A. in the Financial Campaign goes towards the upkeep of Strathcona Hall. The Hall is altogether self-supporting; it balances its own books and needs no aid from the student-body. The appeal for funds was to obtain financial backing for the activities of the McGill Y.M.C.A. at the University, for the benefit of all McGill men, not for the up-keep of the Hall.

Thanking you, etc.

Yours truly,
W. F. MACKLAIR,
Chairman Finance Committee.

To the Editor, "McGill Daily."

Dear Sir,—

Since coming to McGill last year I have been uniformly pleased and gratified at the manner in which student activities of all kinds receive publicity and prominence in the columns of your valuable paper, and if, perhaps, some of the news items are inclined to exaggerate the importance of these functions, I have no doubt that this is entirely due to the over-zealousness of your reporting staff.

There is one fact, however, which has obtruded itself on my notice throughout the past two years, and on enquiry I find that the same conditions have been obtaining for some time. I refer to the paucity of news concerning the doings of our fair sisters of the R. V. C. True, there is a special heading marked "R. V. C. Notes," which contains usually as many as three items which generally have to do with a "meeting of the R. V. C. A. A. at three p.m. sharp in the Common Room," or a solitary four-line notice announcing the thrilling news that there will be a meeting of the Delta Sigma Society at such-and-such a time. In other words, we are merely treated to a glimpse of what goes on in the cloistered seclusion of the Royal Victoria College, but our co-eds themselves seem little disposed to avail themselves of your columns to inform the student-public-at-large of their doings.

This is an unfortunate state of affairs, and has resulted in many of the newer men students believing that the "C" in R. V. C. stands for "convent." I must admit that I, too, entertained a similar belief until I had the good fortune to witness the moving pictures taken of McGill and the students at work and play. In these pictures one was treated to a glimpse of the R. V. C. going through the calisthenic exercises, whose beneficial results are so evident in their collective demeanour and carriage. The graceful abandon with which they skipped and danced and went through the many intricacies of their aesthetic dances was a beautiful sight and made one smile reminiscently at the crude performances some of us—edge of women has kept me a bachelor?—The Technique.

under the old familiar name of "Pip Tock."

Could it not be arranged, sir, that more publicity be given to these R. V. C. activities? I am quite assured that the sight of these graceful nymphs pirouetting so prettily in the rear areas of the R. V. C. was a revelation to many McGill students who saw the picture in question. Why can we not learn something of their efforts towards diversion, or some such topic? I am informed on good authority that there is at least half an hour per day in which the studiously inclined lady scholars have some form of recreation. Surely the comparatively large staff of reporters which figures on the editorial page of the "Daily" under the head R.V.C. Staff are not given their positions merely as a method of getting free advertisement. I repeat, Mr. Editor, that we of the outside world would be intensely interested in any information forthcoming regarding the life of these so-called co-eds, and we would very much like to see the fair reporters there get down to their real business of supplying news about themselves and their classmates.

Trusting that something will be done in this regard, and that immediately.

Yours sincerely,

MORE PUBLICITY.

To the Editor, "McGill Daily."

Dear Sir,—

I would like to draw your attention to a matter which, although it may seem trivial in itself, is one constituting a source of much annoyance to many members of the University. I refer to the ever increasing number of nuns and their charges who congregate on the grounds of McGill every afternoon of the year. A stranger passing the University and observing the vast multitude of infants sporting themselves on the Campus might well inquire whether McGill had established an outdoor kindergarten facility.

If matters continue at their present rate, the services of a traffic policeman will be required to regulate the flow of baby carriages cruising up and down the avenue.

Thanking you in advance for your valued space.

Yours truly,

JUDE TATE.

To the Editor, "McGill Daily."

Dear Sir,—

I think it is only just to give credit where credit is due, and it certainly is coming to the R.V.C. for their splendid showing on Saturday. They sent a very fair deputation up to the game, who bore with much patience all the inconveniences of the journey. And, moreover, they were on hand to welcome the team back. Much has been written against the co-eds this season, but I earnestly believe that it is time we began to realize that they are laboring under severe difficulties, and are doing wonderfully despite circumstances adverse to their carrying on.

Yours etc.,

FAIRNESS.

To the Editor, "McGill Daily."

Dear Sir,—

Now that the football season is definitely over for the year, I think it an opportune time for the Student Body as a whole to give some form of appreciation and recognition to the football team.

It is unnecessary to review the time and energy which the members of the team have expended while training and the true sportsmanlike manner in which they have accepted victory or defeat. I would therefore suggest that as a mark of the esteem in which they are held by the Undergraduates, that they be tendered a Dinner by the whole Student Body.

If this proposal meets with the approval of the Students' Council, as the executive body of the Undergraduates, appoint a committee to arrange for such a dinner, and I would further suggest that if held that as early a date as possible be chosen for the event.

Yours very truly,

D. H. MACFARLANE.

To the Editor, "McGill Daily."

Dear Sir,—

Can you spare me a small space in your paper to make a suggestion, which, on the face of it, might seem unnecessary.

The Cafeteria has proved so popular with the student body that the rather small space is always crowded at lunch time. But this difficulty can to some extent be alleviated by the following suggestion.

Each table in the Cafeteria can serve comfortably for four people. But the difficulty is this. The majority of people after bringing their food to their table do not remove the platter and lean it against the legs of the table. The unnecessary space so used makes it impossible for four to use a single table. If, however, the platter be removed, the accommodation of the Cafeteria will be practically doubled.

Thanking you,

CAFETERIA PATRON.

THE I.O.D.E. WAR MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIPS

Four to Be Granted Annually Throughout Dominion.

DOUGLAS NOMINATED.

Had Fine Record in Athletic and Social Activities.

An article appearing in the "Quebec Chronicle" of November 20th, is of great interest to McGill students. It deals with the I.O.D.E. War Memorial Post-Graduate Scholarships. Four Scholarships are to be given annually in the Dominion, each province nominating one candidate, the final selection of four candidates from the nine is to be made at the I.O.D.E. headquarters in Toronto.

The qualifications are based largely on the same idea as the Rhodes Scholarships. Candidates must qualify in studies, athletic activities, and in the event of these things being equal, on war work.

Eight applications have been received in this province for the Scholarship. Seven of the candidates are recent graduates of the R.V.C. Miss Allie Vibert Douglas was nominated as the one best fulfilling the conditions. Miss Douglas is a B.A. of McGill, and is proceeding to the degree of M.Sc. At present she is on the staff of the Physics Department at McGill.

At college, Miss Douglas took an active part in the Athletic Association, the Delta Sigma Society and the Y.W.C.A. So it is felt that she is extremely well qualified to receive this honor from the I.O.D.E.

In 1915 she gave up her studies and went overseas, where she worked under Sir Auckland Geddes as supervisor of women clerks in the Statistical Department of the Directorate of Recruiting. She then held the position of Registrar in the Khaki University of Canada under Dr. Tory, Principal of Alberta University. In 1918 she became a Member of the British Empire.

Those who know Miss Douglas feel she really deserves this honor, and hope that she may be among the four chosen from the Dominion.

WILL FIGHT VIVISECTION

Anti-Vivisectionists to Commence a Winter Campaign.

To prepare for a vigorous winter campaign against vivisection, the Manchester branch of the British Union for the Abolition of Vivisection called together its members and friends to an opening meeting and reunion at the Albert Memorial Hall, Manchester.

Lady Elverston, presiding, said that the war was fought in defence of the rights of small nations, which could at least articulate their wrongs, whereas animals had no voice with which to protest against the torture and vivisection laboratory. Anti-vivisectionists had gone to war in defence of the rights of animals, who were the weakest section of the community.

C. Rawdon Briggs, a member of the famous Brodsky quartet, after delighting the gathering with his violin, said that instead of torturing defenceless animals in the false hope of discovering some remedy for physical ills, "ought we not to look within ourselves for the cause of our suffering and ask whether or not it was the violation of divine laws which was at the bottom of our physical troubles." Other and better methods of healing would supersede the present ones, therefore the anti-vivisection movement was a movement away from materialism.

J. Cumming Walters, editor of the "Manchester City News," said it was not the hostility of the pro-vivisectionists that dismayed him, but the indifference of the general public many of whom professed to be with them in theory, but did nothing else. People must be roused to a sense of their responsibility in this matter. They must be shown the uselessness of the whole practice, for while the other side produced plenty of statistics, when pressed they could produce no proof of benefit accruing from vivisection. Even the mild experiments excused by some, must be condemned, as the idea was wrong, and there existed no justification for the infliction of pain on others for our own benefit. Vivisection begets callousness, as evidenced by the fact that even women were becoming licensed to perform experiments.

The Rev. A. O. Broadley said that a great deal remained to be done before vivisection tottered to its fall, but England could never be the great country most of them wished to see her, while this cruelty was permitted in their midst.

A rich bride goes young to the church. — German Proverb.

QUESTIONS TO BE ANSWERED FOR THE HALL

Must Be Decided Before Conference.

CAMPAIGN RETURNS.

Will Hall Stay Y.M.C.A. or Join Student Movement?

The time has come for the McGill Y.M.C.A. to make a clear cut decision with regard to its future. Will it remain Y.M.C.A. or join the Student Christian Movement of Canada? That is the question to settle now in order that the McGill delegate who will attend the Guelph Convention at Christmas will know without peradventure the will of the Association at McGill.

The Student Volunteer Movement has also several points to consider; for the question is raised whether this organization will continue as at present with its direct relationship to the New York office of the S. V. Movement, or cast in its lot with the Christian Student Movement of Canada, maintaining an indirect relationship with New York.

The whole matter has been pretty thoroughly discussed by those interested in these bodies. The Y.W.C.A. at McGill has already decided on its course of action, and has appointed a delegate for Guelph. Before a final step is taken in the meeting to be held next Sunday night, the following points should have the thoughtful consideration of every member of the Y.M.C.A.:

1. Do you believe that the McGill Y.M.C.A. should join the new Movement or not?
(a) What are the advantages to be attained by the course of action you would suggest?
(b) What are the disadvantages of the alternative course?

2. Our entrance in the Movement involves participation in the raising of a national budget of about $20,000. / Montreal's share, about $4,000. This maintains four travelling secretaries, office expenses, publication of the "Canadian Student," etc. The Y.W.C.A. of McGill has already accepted this.

(a) Are you prepared to share the responsibility of raising this amount?
(b) If not, would you share in a smaller budget, for a reduced staff?
3. In the event of our joining the Student Movement, consider what you would recommend with regard to Strathcona Hall, which belongs to the McGill Y.M.C.A.

Remember, the right is reserved for any Association to refrain from joining the new Movement after the Guelph Convention, even though a decision favoring it be given now. This meeting will be a joint one with the Y.W.C.A. We want clear thinking, and every point of view presented. Now is the time, not after something has happened! Every member should be there.

SMOKING ROOM AVAILABLE IN ARTS FACULTY

Action Of Authorities Removes Grievance.

LARGE QUARTERS.

Students No Longer Forced To Smoke In Sequestered Cell.

In the Arts Building yesterday morning the general gloom pervading the other buildings as a result of Saturday's misfortune was counteracted to some extent by a welcome piece of news.

The unsuspecting student sauntered down the corridor towards Molson's Hall and found to his delight his haunt of former years, Room 14, restored to its function of "Students' Smoking Room."

Since the opening of the present semester, the absence of adequate smoking room accommodation has been keenly felt by the students. The "Daily" has not been backward in voicing its strong views on the matter, and the authorities realizing the legitimacy of this grievance have finally removed the object of criticism.

The substitution of an obscure cell for Room 14, the spacious, the comfortable — as Smoking Room, was a sad blow to the students, and the joy experienced on its restoration will be general.

Room 14 has served up till now, this year, as a lecture room, and the joyful student will find it even more spacious and comfortable than at the height of its glory. It is sincerely hoped that smoking in the corridors, logical excuse for which can no longer be found, will be immediately discontinued.

GENERAL PRACTICE IN BASKETBALL

Squads Subdivided For Future Practices.

A general practice of the Basketball players was held last evening in the High School Gymnasium, when a very large number of enthusiasts turned out. The men were put through a fairly fast work-out by Art Walsh, and towards the end of the hour, the men from whom the Senior team is to be chosen were lined up, and a short and snappy game was held.

A noticeable feature of the practice was the speed and accuracy of the passing which was displayed throughout the whole practice. The shooting, however, was weak, and with more practice this weakness should be easily overcome. The chief fault was that the forwards were shooting at too great a distance from the baskets, and thus marred the accuracy of the shot.

Among the men trying out for the Senior team were: Caldwell, McKean, Amaron, Ackman, Laishley, Kern, Kemp, Parlow, McPhail, Crain and Brown. By the next practice it is expected that Little and Philpotts will be out, and add to the strength of the team. The Basketball team this season is certain to be featured by the weight and speed of the men who are turning out.

One of the main purposes of the practice was to sub-divide the squads. Hereafter, the Intermediate practices will be held in the Molson Gymnasium, but as a man shows improvement at the second team practices, he will be given his chance with the Seniors, who will continue to hold their practices at the High School Gymnasium.

STUDENTS' COUNCIL.

There will be a meeting of the Students' Council at 1 o'clock Wednesday, in the McGill Union. A full attendance is requested.

REGISTRATION FIGURES SHOW AN INCREASE

Medicine Leads With Science Second.

TOTAL — 2797.

Two Hundred More Students At McGill This Year.

The official registration figures for the present session show an encouraging increase over last year. In the Medical Faculty the increase is considerably greater than in any other faculty. This year over eight hundred students are studying medicine at McGill. Science ranks next with an enrolment of about one hundred and fifty less.

On the whole there are over two hundred more students attending college this year than last year. This puts the sum total at the record figure of 2797.

The rapid growth of the Commerce Faculty is outstanding. This faculty has gained great popularity in the last two years and with the continued improvement of the course even a larger registration is looked for next year. The Arts Faculty with an enrolment of well over five hundred has only been increased by three, whereas Commerce with one hundred and fifty registered, shows an increase of fifty.

The Dental Faculty celebrates its second year of existence as a separate faculty with an increase of over twenty-five.

To the inadequate accommodation offered by the Law Building is accounted to some extent perhaps, the unexpected decrease in that faculty.

There are also decreases in Agriculture and Music.

The decrease in Agriculture is accounted for by the raising of the entrance standard to correspond with that in other faculties.

In the Faculty of Music, although the number of undergraduates and Senior Partials is less than that of last year, there is an increase on the whole, owing to the larger number of Junior students, who, however, are not included in the above total.

The detailed figures are as follows:

TORONTO PAPER BOOSTS MCGILL

Says Saturday's Game Demonstrated McGill's Gameness.

The defeat is not discreditable to McGill, writes G. H. Lash in the "Mail and Empire." In fact, in defeat McGill rose to heights which it could never have reached in victory. There was something which verged on the heroic in their magnificent struggle against overwhelming odds. No touchdown, no victory, over stirred the hearts of so many so deeply, as the spectacle of a half-back — Flanagan — holding grimly to his position, giving his all, until finally exhausted he dropped to the ground and was carried off the field. There was something truly splendid in the spectacle of Dudley Ross, captain of the McGill team, so hurt and bruised that he could hardly stand, refusing, almost angrily, to leave his team, and going down to defeat with them right on the field to the last half second. There was something pathetically wonderful in the valiant but vain effort of the McGill line to do all the work itself when the painful realization came to it that it no longer had a dependable back line for support, and when, at last it earned its touchdown many "Varsity" voices mingled in the cheers.

MCGILL MEN IN AUTO HIKE TO KINGSTON

Five Men Reach Kingston With "Lizzy."

REALLY GET THERE.

Hit Town After Game; Just In Time To Take Train Back.

Perhaps it would be of interest to learn what became of that automobile trip to Kingston, last Saturday? It was rather a fine trip — yes, rather. We hate to tell tales, but the journey certainly deserves mention as indicative of McGill Spirit brought face to face with empty pockets. The actors of this play were five in number; we ache to tell their names, but we might ache more if we did. We will content ourselves with mentioning only that four of them belong to the Faculty of Dentistry (only dentists could do it), and one to the Faculty of Law.

It was Friday night (note well, FRIDAY). A white moon shone, and snow-flakes fell. Ten o'clock chimed, and everywhere all was quiet — except that in one part of the great city of Montreal, five hearts beat almost as hard, if not as loud, as the four cylinders of the Ford in which they attempted to comfort themselves. A great game was to be played on the morrow. For the honor of Old McGill (and Henry Ford) they would do it: drive to Kingston.

They started. Heaven only knows this was not altogether an easy thing to do. But, honest to goodness, they did; they started in a Ford, on a Friday night, an odd number of five, to drive to a land of Prohibition, and not a Theolog amongst them.

The Canadian Highway was not in a condition for a rip-roaring car like theirs. They would use an American road; would beat the "slow-coach G.T.R. Special," and arrive in Kingston early enough to feed, look over the town, and — buy another Ford to return in, before the game started.

The route lay through Rouens Point, Malone, Potsdam, Canton, Ogdensburg, across the water to Prescott, and — on to Kingston. At six of these points the car touched, although it would have lingered; at the seventh it neither touched nor lingered: it was carried.

All night they drove, drove like anything. At three in the morning the gasoline gave out, just in front of a service station. After a terrible clatter about his abode, they roused the unfortunate owner. He gave them some gasoline, but not without mixing it with the choicest of his excrecations. They drove on for another hour. Then the lights went out; on such a dark subject they refused to throw any more light. Joining hands, they felt their way along, dragging the car after them. Still, they reckon they travelled faster during that part of the journey.

It dawned — that they might not reach Kingston as early as they expected. With the coming of daylight, this was confirmed. All morning they drove, but Kingston and the Moon seemed as far away from them now as when they started. . . . We will pass over the numerous incidents that invariably happen to heroes in heroic times — and in Fords.

At six o'clock in the evening, Saturday, November 20, 1920, five, cold, hungry, mud-bespattered boys drove into fair Kingston Town. Some thought that they had come to take the team home, but we all know that they were entirely mistaken. . . . After the autoists learned what the score was, they carried the "car" to the nearest garage, and immediately sent the following telegram home: "Arrived at Kingston contrary to expectations; returning by train."

The Law student claims that the telegraph operator left out "at six o'clock" after "Kingston"; but then, he's a LAW student.

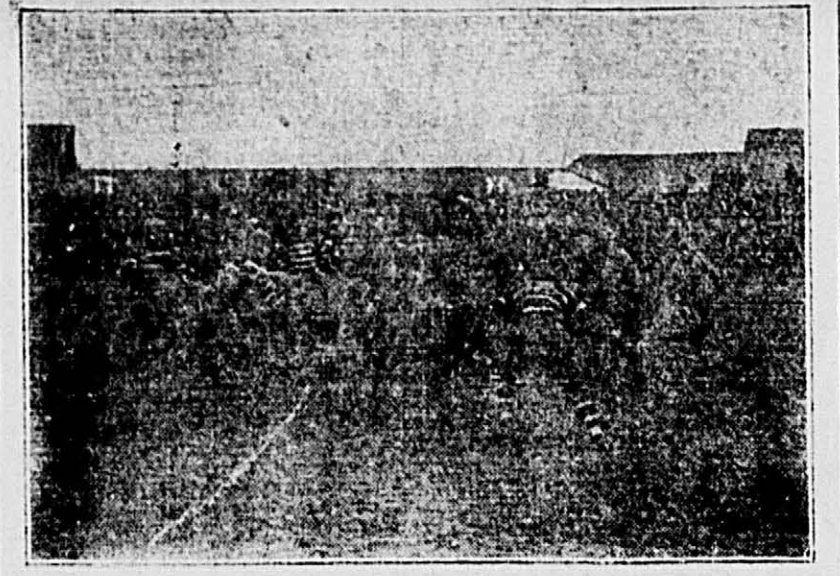

We hesitate to write what our readers might think of this "stunt." But before an opinion is offered, let us remind our readers of their own generous love for excitement and economy, especially when the two might very easily be combined. The five heroes, whose story we have given, were out for fun; that is, for a fine time, a cheap one, and a short one; they got a fine time, all right, a dear one, and a much longer one than they wanted. . . . After all is said and done, the affair is to be applauded. The whole incident, translated into College English should read: "Fun! Pep!" Wherein, then, would a sixty-mile-an-hour express compare with this? From Echo comes: "Wherein indeed?"

the Wesleyans broke away and after some snappy passing, Fife scored nicely with a long shot. The Congregational's defence tightened right up then, and the game ended 24 to 12.

The teams lined up as follows:

THE PRINCESS.

The main feature of the Princess' bill this week is Eva Shirley, a clever young prima donna. She gives a clever rendition of several well-chosen songs, and sings them in a clear, mellow and pleasing voice. Al Roth, her assistant, provides good amusement in his Jazz dancing and vocal efforts, and the accompanying "musical boys" contribute considerable noise and merriment to the entertainment.

Demarest and Collette put on a novel act that was well received and cleverly carried through. Jack Kennedy and his company demonstrated the fact that tennis is not the only game for a "love set" in their skit, "A Golf Proposal." This little oddity featured golfing with an interlude of loving between the strokes. Lydia Barry rendered a good selection of songs and gave evidence of a popularity that comes instantly to those with a good personality. Ward and Green in their "Jokes" contributed several good episodes. Adams and Griffith demonstrated the dire straits that a vocal instructor finds himself in at times, in their little skit.

Young and April in their "Bubbleland," and the animal entertainers, an act which gave cats and other animals an opportunity to gain popularity, complete a good evening's entertainment.

THE ORPHEUM.

"Just a Woman," is a very appropriate title for the play which is presented at the Orpheum Theatre this week. It is the story of a woman's fidelity to her husband in times of great trial and hardship.

The first scene is laid in a Pennsylvania town where "the Man" and "the Woman" toil. The former works in the great steel plant, while the latter conducts a boarding house for the grimy steel workers.

Through the invention of a young Pole whom they befriend, wealth comes to them, and they move to the city of Pittsburgh, where "the Man" becomes a financial power. But with the advent of riches, lust comes, and the woman who has loved for him is being replaced by "the Lady."

"The Woman," with all forces arrayed against her, faces the divorce court to fight for her son. Condemned by false evidence, she admits all in order to keep her boy. In the end, however, reconciliation takes place, and the play ends happily.

The plot is rather hackneyed and the court scene appears more like a farce than a tragedy. But the play has many interesting and tense moments.

Miss Margaret Knight, as "the Woman," plays the premier role effectively. "The Man" is cleverly portrayed by Mr. Harvey Hayes. Mr. William Naughton, as "the Boy," acts with his customary skill. Of the remainder of the cast, Miss Eleanor Carleton, as "the Lady," is the only one who merits special mention.

THE GAYETY.

In presenting "Abe Reynolds' Review," Max Spiegel, who conducted the play in person, made a great hit with the packed house in the Gayety Monday afternoon. "Abe" is not a newcomer in Montreal, and has the reputation of making an excellent performance. This time, however, he brought down an exceptionally good cast of supporters, and, as a whole, the show was very good.

"Abe" got the audience into convulsions when he sang his favorite song entitled, "She's Got It." By the time he was through, the entire audience "had it," and wanted more.

LA SOCIETE FRANCAISE COMEDIANS

Will Give Local Actors a Run For Their Money.

BRILLIANT CASTS.

Wednesday, Nov. 24th, Three Comedies Will Be Staged Within R.V.C. Walls.

The French comedians of this city had better look to their laurels, for it is announced that three comedies which are to be given under the auspices of La Societe Francaise, on Wednesday, November 24th, will prove to be the most startlingly successful attempt of this nature ever staged.

A prize has been offered by the Societe to that year whose members the judges consider to have presented the best play.

Dr. Walter, Prof. du Roure and Dr. Villard have kindly consented to act as judges.

The cast of "Le Retour d'Ulysses," by the third and fourth years, is as follows:

|             |                 |
|-------------|-----------------|
| Ulysses     | Rebecca Contant |
| Penelope    | Doris Sharples  |
| Theano      | Ruth Shattford  |
| Greek Slave | Dorothea Ayles  |

LOEW'S.

This week Loew's has a programme which will not fail to please the most exacting of its patrons. There are items for the comically inclined and items for the serious minded and also for the musical. "The Dance of the Hours," a selection from "Gloconda," as rendered by the orchestra, is worthy of Loew's. Much of the credit, however, is due to the conductor.

This musical item was followed by a Mark Sennett Comedy, named "It's a Boy." Pictures of the visit of the stage and screen stars to Montreal and Ottawa were also shown. Another item was the Pathe News, featuring Lockslear the "Daredevil of the Air."

The vaudeville this week is excellent. The Perinnes, in Act I, show some new variations of skipping and acrobatic tricks.

Particular good are E. J. Moore and his company. His card tricks and magical stunts are puzzling, and his line of chatter is incomparable, and keeps the audience in continuous laughter.

Lehoen and Dupree, in the third act, showed a rather good brand of rifle shooting, making difficult shots from all sorts of impossible angles and postures. Their talk is also very good; but what appeals most is that expressive expression "Hot Dog."

The rifle accompaniment to the singing of "Smiles" is worthy of especial notice.

"The Long and Short of It," are visually and vocally expressed by Keatings and Ross in the fourth act; and they ably entertained the audience with their talk.

"Fads and Follies," the fifth of the five big acts, was just what the name would imply. Pretty girls and excellent singing are the chief characteristics. Particularly pretty was the heroine, and quite well did she sing.

All theatre-goers are assured of spending a pleasant evening by paying Loew's a visit.

The Photoplay of the evening is "Suds," featuring Mary Pickford. The picture is very weak, with neither plot nor sequel. It simply depicts the life of a poor girl in the slums of London, and although the acting of Mary is passable, that is the best that can be said about it.

NEW GRAND.

The main feature at the Grand Theatre this week is "Twin Beds," a comedy on the screen which is certainly well worth seeing if a person feel inclined to indulge in a hearty laugh. From beginning to end the wrapped interest of the onlooker is roused to the fullest extent. Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven are the stars featuring in this play and who most assuredly made an illustrious success of it.

There is another worthy and noticeable attraction at this movie resort, and that is in having all Canadian films. From the pictorial and current news sections one gets glimpses and bits of news of what is taking
